About National Level Conference :

India has experienced rapid growth and development in the past years in many spheres of economy as well as business sector. Women in India make up 7.5% of the world's total population. While certain development indicators show their quality of life is improving – maternal mortality rates declining; literacy rates increasing; more women gaining access to healthcare and education the pace of change is heartbreakingly slow. In India, where the economy has been growing rapidly over the past 30 years, woman workforce has been playing a very significant role in the expansion and growth of the Indian economy.

Imagine a situation wherein, we are without iconic ladies such as Indira Gandhi, and Kiran Bedi. Pepsi Co head, Indira Nooyi and Biscoe's Kiran Mazumdar-Shaw, Naina Lal Kidwai the Deputy Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of HSBC, Chandra Kochar is the MD of ICICI banks India, Arundhati Bhattacharya Chairperson of SBI these women have created history in the business world and banking sector of India not only because of their personal achievement, but also because of their initiative to boost India's corporate performance. Noted rural entrepreneurs such as Jashwanth Popat who pioneered Lijjat papad are proof of the strong capabilities of Indian women to mold positive social change in India. Indian women play a significant role in initiating socio-economic progress of the country. The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.

Usually, economic growth goes hand in hand with participation of women. But data available with the International Labour Organization (ILO) shows a decline for India. Between 2004 to 2011, when the Indian economy grew at a healthy average of about 7%, there was a decline in female participation in the country's labour force from over 35% to 25%. It's a puzzling picture: over the past few decades, access to education for Indian women has increased but still they have increasingly stayed away from employment. Women produce merely 17% of India's economic output in terms of GDP contribution.

The Indian development model has yet to fully incorporate the important role played by women for propelling the socio-economic growth of the country. Current governments at state and central level must understand that no nation can progress unless its women are given equal access to opportunities and adequate safety and security.

The International women Organization has declare slogan for 2017 as "Be Bold For Change" UNISCO too had declared that "Women in the Changing world of work Place 50 : 50 till 2030".
